Ushuaia, Chile: "Fin Del Mundo"

This is the last entry of my travel blog. It's Tuesday, October 17th, and I've arrived in Ushuaia, in Chile, on the last stage of my journey. It has been an amazing three-month trip in South America. I started my trip in Ecuador in August, and I've traveled through four huge countries. In September, I was in the Bolivian Pampas. It was amazing! We caught piranha for dinner, and swam with alligators. In October, I was in Argentina, where I saw whales and elephant seals in Puerto Madryn. And now I'm in Chile, in the most southerly city in the world! I've been on the most exciting train trips, the most boring bus rides, and the scariest taxi rides. I've met some great people – and some weird people, too! I've seen incredible mountains, beautiful lakes, and awesome volcanoes! I've been to tiny villages, huge cities, and colorful street markets. It has been incredible, and I'll never forget it!
